

Before creating a profile on The Compass, please review our terms of use.

The Compass: Terms of Use

Before completing The Compass questionnaire, there are a few important considerations that you should know.

1. Ready, Willing and Able (RWA) is a partnership initiative between Inclusion Canada and the Autism Alliance of Canada. The program is governed and managed by an executive committee and national team that we refer to as the RWA Program. RWA's The Compass is owned by Autism Alliance of Canada, an Ontario entity. RWA uses Simple Survey as the service provider to host The Compass questionnaire. As such, personal information collected through The Compass is stored with a provider (Simple Survey) in Canada.
2. By completing this questionnaire, you are acknowledging that you identify as an individual on the Autism Spectrum and consent to sharing this information with the Autism Alliance of Canada.
3. By completing this questionnaire, you will be sharing your contact information with the RWA team and consent to being contacted by a local RWA team member.
4. By completing this questionnaire, you represent and warrant to us that you are: (a) an individual seeking supports and are not completing the questionnaire on behalf of any other individual without their consent and (b) 16 years of age or older
5. All personal information collected will be retained by RWA for the duration of the initiative. Upon formal completion of the initiative, any and all identifying information (including your name and contact information) will be deleted or destroyed.
6. With your consent, Autism Alliance of Canada will collect and use some of the data gathered in this brief questionnaire for research purposes. In collecting this data, RWA aims to develop a better understanding of the current employment and support experiences of individuals on the Autism Spectrum with the ultimate goal of improving what employment supports are available and how they are delivered to individuals on the Autism Spectrum.

Any identifying information (including your name and contact information) will be removed from the research database, making it highly unlikely that researchers, or anyone viewing published research results, could identify you or any other person or employer on the basis of the data. This data would be accessible by the research team approved by Ready, Willing and Able and Autism Alliance of Canada, for use in the broader evaluation of the Ready, Willing and Able initiative. The database would not be publicly accessible, nor will anything in it be used for non-research or commercial purposes.